

Shannon O'Lear, Ph.D.

-- Bio --

October 2015

Shannon O'Lear is a Professor at the University of Kansas. She has appointments in the Department of Geography and the Environmental Studies Program and is affiliated with the university's Center for Russian, East European and Eurasian Studies. She is the Associate Director of the Center for Global and International Studies where she oversees a Master's degree program for Special Forces Officers from Ft. Leavenworth. As a political geographer, her works focuses on spatial dimensions of power and critiques of security and violence. She has taught courses on Environmental Policy, Environmental Geopolitics, Political Geography, Geopolitics of Russia & Eurasia, Geography of Genocide, and Introductory Human Geography. Her region of research is the South Caucasus. She has published articles on the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict in the South Caucasus, territorial conflict, resource conflict, borders, environmental security, and genocide. Her co-edited volume, Reframing Climate Change: Constructing Ecological Geopolitics, was published by Routledge in August 2015. Her book, Environmental Politics: Scale and Power, was published by Cambridge University Press in 2010. She has received a Kemper Teaching Award and has served as a Faculty Fellow at the Center for Teaching Excellence at the University of Kansas. She received her B.A. and MA degrees from the University of Colorado at Boulder and holds a Ph.D. in Geography from Syracuse University.